WELCOME to Jacobs Field!

Dear Indians Fans:

The 2003 Major League Baseball season will be the 10th at Jacobs Field. Many memorable moments have been created in that short period of time — two World Series, an All-Star Game, 29 post-season games. Last at-bat heroics . . . too many to count!

It all started with a group of talented young players who, when given the opportunity to establish themselves at the Major League level, developed into a series of teams that put Cleveland back on the baseball map. Record-setting performances on the field and in the seats followed, thanks to the passion of Tribe fans.

We are poised to repeat that same success story. In a short period of time, General Manager Mark Shapiro and his staff have fortified the foundation of the team — our player development system — which is ranked at the top among all 30 MLB teams according to a number of national baseball publications. We have taken a large step in the process of identifying the players who will become the building blocks of our future success.

The job is not done, however, as manager Eric Wedge often states. The next step is developing the young players and providing the opportunity to perform at the Major League level. Together we look forward to the 2003 season with excitement as we begin to build and sustain a championship team in an environment of superior sports entertainment at Jacobs Field.

Your enjoyment of Indians Baseball is our main priority — whether you choose to enjoy listening on the Indians Radio Network with flagship station WTAM, watching on FOX Sports Net, accessing via our website at indians.com, reading the newspaper, or visiting Jacobs Field.

While 2003 is the 10th season at Jacobs Field, it is also the 103rd season as a Charter Member of the American League. Professional baseball in Cleveland is one of the city's oldest traditions. With that rich heritage comes a civic trust.

We pledge our commitment to a supportive community that understands the important connection between Indians Baseball at Jacobs Field and the significant economic impact this link creates for Northeast Ohio.

Here's hoping we see you often at Jacobs Field.

Sincerely,

Larry Dolan

6 B.A.'s CORNER by Chuck Murr

Tribe pitcher and Northeast Ohio native Brian Anderson shares his experiences with GAME FACE readers from time to time at "B.A.'s Corner." This month . . . Brian's five favorite big-league ballparks.

10 THE CLEVELAND INDIANS

Check out these full-page photos of the Tribe. You know the veterans. Now you can get to know the Indians young athletes.

32 REMEMBERING A CLEVELAND LEGEND by Chuck Murr

Mel Harder, who passed away last October, was one of the greatest pitchers to ever wear an Indians uniform. He was also one of the team's best pitching coaches – credited with developing the talents of other members of the team's pitching elite.

You may have noticed that each member of the Tribe is wearing a circular patch on his jersey that features the number 18 – Mel Harder's number, which the Indians have retired.

48 YOUNG GUNS by Steve Herrick

The Indians started the season with four promising pitching talents in the starting rotation who are 25 years old or younger. The Tribe boasts still more pitching talents – in the bullpen and in the Minors – who are of similar age and potential.

The Cleveland Indians 2003 Community Spirit of Partnership

The Cleveland Indians are proud to serve the Northeast Ohio community by providing a variety of educational, recreational, and humanitarian programs for Tribe fans of all ages. Programs are designed to improve the quality of life of those less fortunate, to support youth in reaching their full potential, and to foster self-confidence. We embrace the opportunity to be a responsible corporate citizen serving the Greater Cleveland communities.

John McDonald's Father's Day Contest

This season, second baseman John McDonald will make Father's Day extra special for fathers everywhere. The program, "Mac & Me" will allow Tribe fans under the age of 18 a chance to enter their name in a raffle and win A Day at Jacobs Field with Johnny Mac and his dad!

One hundred names will be randomly drawn to select the winners as special guests of John and his father. Winners will enjoy lunch at Jacobs Field, receive a special Mac & Me t-shirt, observe batting practice, and meet John, his dad, and other Tribe players prior to the game.

Lawton's Little Leaguers

For the second season, outfielder Matt Lawton will once again bring hundreds of local youth to attend a Tribe game this summer. "Lawton's Little Leaguers" is open to local non-profit organizations serving disadvantaged youth in Northeast Ohio. Each "Lawton's Little Leaguers" participant will enjoy a boxed lunch, see batting practice, receive a "Lawton's Little Leaguers" t-shirt, and meet Matt before the game.

B.A.'s

By Chuck Murr

Brian Anderson is back home and eager to talk with Clevelanders about his experiences in both Major Leagues. The always affable lefthander will share his thoughts with GAME FACE readers from time to time at "B.A.'s Corner." This month, Brian lists his five favorite big-league ballparks and tells us why they are so special.

"First off, I'm going to give a bit of a different list," Anderson said. "I think any guy who has played in both leagues and is given this opportunity will always mention Wrigley Field, Fenway Park, and Yankee Stadium, and I'm not denying how tremendous those parks are. Just getting a chance to play on the same field as some of the legends is a huge thrill, don't get me wrong. But, my list excludes Wrigley, Fenway, and Yankee Stadium."

No. 5 – Shea Stadium, New York

First game: April 17, 1964. Capacity: 55,601.

"Shea Stadium captures that New York baseball feeling. It may not be the nicest, newest facility in baseball, but the atmosphere is tremendous. You can't beat the New York fans. They sit over the dugout and are all over you. But they are people you can go back and forth with, not in a mean way, but just goof with each other. They sense a little self-deprecating humor from a player and it becomes a neat love-hate relationship that is not cut-throat.

"The planes flying over from LaGuardia Airport next door don't bother you when you're on the mound because you're so focused on your job. In the bullpen the constant noise gets old real quick, but the overall atmosphere is great.

"I always looked forward to that trip because you just never knew what you were going to see – but you knew it was going to be interesting."

Young Guns

by Steve Herrick

Most baseball experts will agree that forming a young, talented pitching staff is one of the essential ingredients to a team that's going to be successful. If that's the case, the Indians have laid the groundwork for what they hope will be a solid rotation for years to come.

While several young pitchers are already making an impact in Cleveland, many more are doing well in the Minor Leagues. The wealth of young pitchers has put the Indians in an enviable position.

"It's an exciting time as an organization with our young arms," said Tribe pitching coach Carl Willis. "It's not just their physical abilities, but it's also exciting to find out how quickly they can have success as well."

When the Indians dominated the American League Central from 1995 through 2001, the team was built around a high-powered offense that put up big numbers on a daily basis. While the club is high on several of its young position players, the strength of the organization is in its pitching. Over the last several years, through the amateur draft and trades, the Indians have assembled a large pool of talented young pitchers that's already paying dividends at the big-league level. And there are more on the way that could be in Cleveland sometime this season and surely within the next year or two.

"We've had some outstanding drafts," said assistant general manager Neal Huntington. "We've been able to acquire a number of pitchers in trades. It's been a combination of trades and drafting. We have a lot of talent. It's very encouraging."

Acquiring the young pitchers has been a group effort. General manager Mark Shapiro has made several trades to pick up young arms in the last two years. A great deal of credit for that goes to the front office and scouts that helped find some of the top pitching prospects in other organizations.

"(Assistant general manager, scouting operations) John Mirabelli has done a great job identifying good arms in the draft, and our front office has done a great job identifying pitchers we've been able to pick up in trades," said Willis. "Our player development system has done an outstanding job with these kids in the Minor Leagues. When they got up here, they were ready to compete at the big-league level, not just get their feet wet."

In several of the trades, the Indians have received young pitchers who were close to being ready for the big leagues. That has allowed the Indians to not have to rush any of them to the Majors.

"I think we've done a pretty good job at not force-feeding guys," said Huntington. "Our depth will allow us not to have to do that. We can err on the side of being patient. We're not just running guys out there. We think they can give the team a chance to win."

The Indians started the 2003 season with four pitchers in the starting rotation who were 25 years old or younger – lefthander C.C. Sabathia and righthanders Ricardo Rodriguez, Jason Davis, and Jake Westbrook. In the bullpen and just as young are closer Danys Baez and lefthander Billy Traber (who has a future as a starter). Relievers David Riske and Carl Sadler are just 26.

Sabathia, who will turn 23 in July, was the Indians No. 1 pick in the 1998 draft. He made the team in Spring Training of 2001 and finished 17-5 with a 4.39 ERA in 33 starts. Despite being only 20 years old for most of the season, Sabathia led Major League rookie pitchers in wins, starts, and strikeouts (171). He also finished second in the American League Rookie of the Year voting.

After a slow start last season, Sabathia ended 2002 with a 13-11 record and a 4.37 ERA. He was 7-2 with a 2.54 ERA in his last 11 starts.

"C.C. has been with us since 1998," Willis said of Sabathia, who can hit 95 miles-per-hour on the radar gun. "He's a tremendous person with a tremendous amount of God-given ability. He's learning how important it is to be a pitcher, not just a thrower. He has a power arm, but he's using his off-speed pitches, which makes his fastball even better."

While some people might view Sabathia as a veteran, he was the youngest pitcher on the Indians staff on Opening Day.

"When you look at what C.C. has accomplished at his age, you realize how special he is," said Huntington.

Rodriguez, 25, was acquired from Los Angeles in the deal that sent Paul Shuey to the Dodgers on July 28 of last season. He was rated the Dodgers No. 1 pitching prospect by Baseball America going into last season. Rodriguez was 2-2 with a 5.66 ERA in seven starts for the Tribe in 2002.

"Ricardo can do a lot of things with his breaking pitches and has an above-average fastball," Willis said. "He works both halves of the plate and changes speeds."

Rodriguez, who hits 93 to 94 mph, throws both a two-seam and four-seam fastball to go along with a breaking ball and changeup. He also sinks the ball.

"The thing I'm most impressed about with Rico is the feeling he has for his secondary pitches," said Willis. "All the physical ability is there."

Despite his age, Rodriguez isn't afraid to challenge hitters. He's aggressive and goes after hitters. Rodriguez hit eight batters in seven starts last season and likes to back hitters off the plate.

"He has a lot of competitiveness inside him," said Willis. "Sometimes his emotions can cause him to get out of his box, but he's been doing a better job of that."

Davis, 23, was the Indians 21st-round pick in the 1999 draft and is still relatively new at baseball. Davis is in his fourth season of professional baseball. He made the jump from Class A Kinston, where he began last season, to the big leagues in 2002. He was 1-0 with a 1.84 ERA in three games with the Tribe last season.

"That's pretty special," Willis said of Davis' quick ascent to the Majors. "It speaks volumes for his ability."

"He's probably one of the guys who got here a little quicker than we thought, but his stuff was so good he was able to do it," said Huntington.

The 6-foot-6 Davis might have the best arm in the organization.

"Jason has an explosive fastball, which he can sink as well," said Willis. "He uses his splitter off his fastball and has an above-average slider. He has tremendous physical ability."

Davis throws in the mid-90s while his splitter can reach the low-90s. A splitter thrown at that velocity can be almost unhittable if it breaks out of the strike zone. Davis also fields his position well.

"He's probably one of the guys who got here a little quicker than we thought, but his stuff was so good he was able to do it."

Tribe Assistant GM, Neal Huntington
on Jason Davis

Despite being in pro ball since 1996, when he was the No. 1 pick of the Colorado Rockies, Westbrook is still only 25 years old. The Indians acquired him on July 25, 2000 in a trade that sent David Justice to the New York Yankees. Injuries affected him the last two seasons, but he made the team in Spring Training.

"Jake does a good job at sinking the baseball," said Willis. "He has a good changeup, plus he's really improved his breaking ball. He can hit 92, but he has a good three-pitch mix. That allows him to be a confident pitcher."

"People think Jake has been around for a long time, but he's still a young pitcher," said Huntington.

Righthander Danys Baez is in his third season with the Indians, but won't turn 26 until September. Signed as a free agent on November 6, 1999, he made it to Cleveland during the 2001 season as a setup man. He spent most of last season as a starter, but was moved to the closer's role late in the season. With a fastball in the mid-90s and a nasty split-finger fastball, Baez has the talent to be one of the top closers in the game.

Traber, 23, was acquired in the deal that sent Roberto Alomar to the New York Mets following the 2001 season. He split last season between Class AA Akron and Class AAA Buffalo, going 17-5 with a 2.94 ERA. Traber made the big-league roster as a reliever in Spring Training.

"Billy's made the adjustment to being in the bullpen," said Willis. "He's been able to watch the game and watch hitters. That's helped him make the transition."

“We felt he was very accomplished,” said Huntington. “That’s one reason why we felt he could make the switch. He locates his fastball, has command of his pitches, and can hold runners.”

Unlike many of the Indians young pitchers, Traber doesn't have a power arm. He hits 91 mph, but also relies on a curveball, changeup, and splitter. Moving pitches in and around the strike zone are his keys to success.

“He’s not going to throw you three straight fastballs,” said Willis. “He changes speeds and has the ability to control and command his breaking ball.”

Righthander David Riske, 26, is one the the Indians setup men this season. A 56th round draft pick in 1996, he has spent parts of the 1999, 2001, and 2002 seasons with the Tribe. Riske missed most of the 2002 season because of back and elbow surgery. He has a deceptive delivery and throws in the low 90s.

Lefthander Carl Sadler, 26, another setup man, made the jump from Class AA Akron to the Indians last season. He recovered from two elbow operations in 1998 and has been pitching in the Indians organization since 1999. Sadler is especially effective against lefthanded hitters.

Willis, who was named the Indians pitching coach late in Spring Training, is in his seventh season with the organization. He thinks being in the big leagues can help young pitchers in several ways.

"It's a matter of them gaining experience and finding a comfort level in the big leagues," Willis said. "It's not only pitching in the games, but developing their routine between starts and finding out the best way to be ready for each start."

The talent doesn't stop there. The Indians have several top prospects in their Minor League system, including lefthanders Cliff Lee (acquired last season from Montreal in the deal that sent Bartolo Colon to the Expos) and Brian Tallet (their No. 2 draft pick in 2000) and righthanders Jeremy Guthrie (their No. 1 draft pick last season), Brian Slocum (the second round pick in 2002), Francisco Cructetta (acquired with Rodriguez in the Shuey trade), Fernando Cabrera (a 10th round pick in the 1999 draft) and Dan Denham, J.D. Martin, Jake Dittler, Travis Foley, and Sean Smith (all taken in the 2001 draft).

The Indians are confident all have a chance to make an impact in the Majors. Such depth also will open up trade possibilities if the Indians try to strengthen themselves at other positions.

"We have good depth in arms," said Huntington. "Every single pitcher in the rotation for our Minor League teams we consider legitimate Major League prospects."

Lee and Tallet both pitched with the Indians late last season. Lee was a strong candidate to make the team before pulling a rib cage muscle in the off-season. He missed all of Spring Training. Tallet started the season at Buffalo while Guthrie began the season at Akron.

"Having this many good young arms has put us in a pretty good position," said Willis. "This should get us going in the right direction."

And as the Indians continue to head in the right direction, there's not much doubt they'll get there thanks to their strong young arms.

Jacobs Field tours include a visit to the Press Box, Bullpen, Club Lounge, Dugout, Batting Cages, and Party Suite. The Visitors Clubhouse is included in tours of Jacobs Field on select dates. (The tour route is subject to change.)

Tickets are $6.50 for adults and $4.50 for youths 14 and under and senior citizens 60 and over. A group rate is available at 1PM each day. Tour tickets are available at any Indians Team Shop, at the Jacobs Field Main Box Office, at any Northern Ohio OfficeMax, or at indians.com. (The group rate is only available at the Jacobs Field Main Box Office.)

With support from OfficeMax, a special school tour program is also available in April, May, early June, and all of September.

Executive Suites

Perfect for Business or Pleasure

Are you tired of spending hours on the phone or e-mailing clients or business associates? Reserve an Executive Suite today for the game of your choice and enjoy Indians baseball from the comfort of Your Personal Suite. Show your clients that your organization is first-class by inviting them to a Jacobs Field Suite this season.

Suites can accommodate from eight to 40 guests and provide the very best in services to make your game experience one to remember.

Excellent amenities include:

- Up to three complimentary VIP parking passes for the Gateway East Garage
- Gameday membership to the Club Lounge
- Private Suite with separate concourse
- Private rest rooms, refrigerator, ice maker, bar, and service station – additional items may be purchased in advance or ordered from the gameday menu
- Television and audio options that are controlled by Suite holder

Pepsi Corporate Hitting Challenge

June through September

Batter up for the Eighth Annual Pepsi Corporate Hitting Challenge! This unique event offers teams of nine batters and three alternates the chance to step up to the plate at Jacobs Field in a hitting tournament. Registration includes practice time in the batting cages, your name on the scoreboard, commemorative gift, prizes each round, and more. The 2002 tournament winner was FirstEnergy, with Giant Eagle coming in second place.

In-park Silent Auction

Runs throughout the entire season

Bidder up! Here's your chance to own a piece of the Tribe. New for 2003 will be silent auctions held at Jacobs Field during select home games. About 10 unique pieces of memorabilia will be up for auction each date, including signed items. Items will vary each date. Check out the auction table in the concourse on these dates:

Sunday, April 13	Friday, May 16
Saturday, May 31	Friday, June 13
Saturday, June 28	Thursday, July 10
Sunday, July 13	Sunday, August 17.

Participants in the Pepsi Corporate Hitting Challenge experience the excitement of a "big league" at-bat at Jacobs Field (top and bottom). Teammates offer each other encouragement before the competition (middle).

In-park silent auction dates are subject to change. Fans must be in attendance at the designated game to bid on items.
